HOW SAL "DISGRACED THE FAMILY."

A traveler in the State of Illinois some years ago came to a lone log-hut on the prairie near Cairo, and there halted. He went into the house. It was a wretched affair—an empty room with a table, while two or three chairs and a disreputable stool graced the reception room, the dark walls of which were further ornamented with a display of tin ware and a broken shell article or two. The woman was crying in the corner, and the man, with tears in his eyes and a pipe in his mouth, on a stool, with his head looking back, supported by the wall, his hands. Not a word greeted the interloper.

"Well," he said, "you seem to be in awful trouble here. What's up?"

"Ah! we are almost crazed, neighbor," said the woman; "and we ain't got patience to see folks now."

"That's all right," said the stranger, not much taken back by the polite rebuff; "but can I be of any service to you in all this trouble?"

"Well, we've lost our gal; our Sil's gone off and left us," said the old man, in tones of deep despair.

"Ah, do you know what induced her to leave you?" said the new arrival.

"Well, we can't say, neighbor, as how she's gone for so far to be induced, but then she's gone and disgraced us," remarked the afflicted father.

"Yes, stranger, and not as I should say it as her mother—but that wasn't a proper gal in all the West than our Sil. She's gone and brought ruin on her own head now," followed the stricken mother.

"Who has she gone off with?" inquired the visitor.

"Well, there's the trouble. The gal could have done well, and might have married Martin Kohn, a capital shoemaker, who although he has lost one eye, he's got the state in a lively manner, and curvy a good living. Then look, what a life she has deserted; she was surrounded by all the luxury in the country," said the father.

"Yes, who knows what poor Sil will have to eat, drink, and wear now?" groaned the old woman.

"And who is the fellow that has taken her into such misery?"

"Why, she's gone off and got married to a better called editor, as lives in the village, and the Lord only knows how he'll earn a living."

A "BRIDLE" TANGLE.

In Artemus Ward's lecture on ghosts, he tells of an absurd man who wouldn't have any glass in his windows—he thought the ash would be enough, as it would keep out the coarsest of the cold. This reminds of a correspondent of a story that old Parson H. of I. used to tell of his experience of the cold on a "chill-tower" to his cousin's, down on the Connecticut coast, and spent the night, which was one of the coldest of the season, and being put into a cold spare room, they suffered severely. After awhile his wife asked him to get up and see if he couldn't find something more to put upon the bed. After diligent search, he could find nothing but his own and his wife's clothing which he gathered up and put upon the bed, and got in and tried it again, but still they grew no warmer very fast, and his wife begged him to get up and search about to see if anything more could be found, and suggested that there might possibly be something in a closet in one corner of the room. So he went and examined the closet, and he found a pair of old fish net was the only thing he could find. "Well, my dear," said he, "put it on, put it on, that will tangle the cold a little."

HOW LOUIS NAPOLEON LOOKS.

A Paris correspondent writes as follows:—During five or six months passed in Paris, I never saw Louis Napoleon until yesterday. I never took the trouble to see him. If it were possible for the male or female Sphinx to form a matrimonial alliance with one of the sons or daughters of Israel, I should expect that a woman of that persuasion would be born with a visage of the same type as that of the Emperor of the French. In its expression is combined the mystery of the Sphinx with the cunning of a Jew. And all the world knows that the characteristics of the man are in harmony with these traits of his physiognomy. Louis Napoleon has a hooked nose, but his hook is more that of the hawk than of the eagle.

Returning to Paris from St. Cloud through the Bois de Boulogne, he descended from the carriage and walked for half an hour along the border of the great lake. I do not remember to have seen a face with a more profound expression of stern gravity, but I would not say of impossibility. The lines are slightly deeper than one would expect to see in a man of fifty-five, and a very decided general tone of age is beginning to settle upon the whole physiognomy. The skin has a leathery, bilious hue, and the features bear traces of the acute pains which it is known that he has suffered from swaying motion in the gut as he leaned rather heavily upon the arm of his companion. The Emperor's mien is such that he is not able to go on horseback without suffering intense pain, and all his visits to Mineral Springs do not seem to produce any permanent relief. Happily or unhappily, European affairs are in a state of stagnation, and he is able to find his dominions who are bound to use the knife without causing pain. Think of Louis Napoleon coming to a surgeon's table after having escaped the bombs of Orsini and other attempts upon his life!

GEN. McCLELLAN'S WOODWARD LETTER.

Gen. McClellan's opponents find much fault with his letter of favor of the Democratic candidate for Governor in Pennsylvania. We don't see how he could have failed to write it, when the politicians were using his name against the man he wanted elected. He would have written no letter if he had not had him alone. Everybody knows that McClellan was and always has been a Democrat, and in fact he has been a Democrat, and that is all they have discovered by his letter. It is said that a military man in active service shall attempt to control politics; but McClellan was not in active service, while other Generals who were quite busy in trying to carry this State for Curtis in a minor among those who did not reside in Pennsylvania, their speeches were made during the canvass by Gen. Butler, Gen. Sigel, Gen. Busted, Gen. Cochrane, and Col. Montgomery; and yet the Abolition papers do not renege their interference in our election. It does not matter which side a man favors, for if he has the right to take action at all, he has the right to advocate the claims of the party or the men he prefers, whatever other people may think of them.—Sunday Mercury.

Don't know what you mean by not being in Lincoln, said a gentleman who was hiring a boy. In your own house, in Ireland. Oh, your honor, if that's all, said the boy, small blame to that. Suppose your out was to leave kittens in the oven, would they be leaves of bread?

"Oh, father," exclaimed a delighted youngster, "I've epherred through election, partition, subordination, distinction, abomination, justification, hallucination, damnation, and apputation."

A little girl, showing her cousin, about four years old, a star, said, "That star you are in, is bigger than the world." "No, it isn't," said the boy. "It is." "Then, why don't it keep the rain off?"

"Over the left" has been abandoned for "over the wing."
